

“Plugging In To Literacy”

Digital Literacy Breakout Sessions
September 21, 2018

Session One – OneNet Conference Room

Dr. Jody Bowie - Southern Nazarene University

Digital Literacy is Not Enough

This session will explore the idea of Digital Fluency vs. Literacy and lessons learned while teaching a second-level undergraduate technology course to pre-service teachers and a Master's-level course to in-service teachers. Our explorations will provide both a rationale for the purposeful goal of technology ubiquity and exposure to multiple frameworks for technology integration in education. ISTE Standards for Teachers will be used throughout the session.

Session Two – Kiva Room

Dr. Maribeth Nottingham and Dr. Barbara McClanahan

Southeastern Oklahoma State University

Graphic Novels: Why and How They Belong in your Classroom

Although use of graphic texts in schools is growing, there is evidence that many teachers are not yet comfortable with them. This workshop will offer a systematic approach to help teachers master the basics of graphic-text reading for themselves. Participants will practice several specific strategies that can be used to teach their students how to read graphic texts.

Session Three – Colloquium Room

Dr. Sheri Vasinda - Oklahoma State University

The Future is Now! Transforming Literacy Practices Through Powerful Pairings of Easy-Access Digital Tools

Most of our students are using digital tools in their lives outside of school right now! So, to prepare our students for their present AND their future, we need to use tools that are readily available and easy to access to transform their literacy learning. Join us with your device (phone, tablet, or laptop) to engage in some transformative tools.
